HOTEL VIER JAHRESZEITEN

GARMISCH-PARTENKIRCHEN

Hotel Vier Jahreszeiten

The hotel was built in 1913 directly opposite the new Garmisch-Partenkirchen railway station. The original name of the hotel at that time was "Bahnhof Hotel." At a time when horse-drawn carriages still dominated the station forecourt, the hotel stood almost alone in the open countryside. Guests were picked up at the station by the hotel porter with a wooden cart for their luggage.

The owners and founders of the hotel were the Schmidt family. As a long-established family, they ran the hotel until after the war years of the Second World War.

After the war, the hotel served as a military hospital for wounded American soldiers. Gradually, the hotels in Garmisch-Partenkirchen were returned to their owners, and so the Schmidt family regained possession of their hotel.

Under its new name, "Hotel Vier Jahreszeiten," the Schmidt family ran it very successfully, and it was known beyond the borders of Bavaria. Even back then, they placed great importance on providing family-friendly service to their guests.

Tourists from near and far shaped the scene at the train station square. The central location has always been a big plus. From here, it was an ideal starting point for excursions into the Upper Bavarian countryside and to the two districts of Garmisch and Partenkirchen.

Bavarian cuisine in a modern establishment, Bavarian beer, a beer parlor, and even a traditional Schlaraffenkeller awaited locals and tourists alike. The hotel's offerings have always been aimed at a broad range of guests. This set it apart from other hotels of the same name. The "Vier Jahreszeiten" in Garmisch-Partenkirchen did not want to cater only to guests with high incomes, but to offer the right package for all travelers visiting this beautiful place.

After the Schmidt family's descendants decided not to follow in their parents' footsteps in the hotel business and chose other career paths, the family decided to lease the hotel. From 1975 to 1985, the Hubertus restaurant in the Hotel Vier Jahreszeiten was home to one of the first pizzerias in town. From 1985 to 1995, a Munich-based family of restaurateurs attempted to successfully continue the hotel's history. The difficult circumstances at the time meant that the beautiful hotel lost some of its influence and thus also temporarily lost some of its importance.

At the end of 1995, the Ortlieb family took over the hotel and quickly managed to reintegrate the Vier Jahreszeiten into the ranks of the town's traditional establishments. As in the early days, the hotel's ideal location was a key factor. In the upscale 3-star category, the hotel offers everything a modern establishment in this price range needs. Vacationers can still enjoy a cool Bavarian beer on the sun terrace, while local guests can do the same in the beer parlor, and everyone can enjoy the hospitality of the staff. In the more than twenty years that the Ortlieb family has been restoring the hotel to its former glory, they have also adapted to the new structure of guests in Garmisch-Partenkirchen. The program for guests includes not only sightseeing in the surrounding area or getting to know the districts of Garmisch and Partenkirchen. Wellness and fitness at a low price are the requirements for an active hotel today.

"We are not afraid to compare ourselves with other hotels that bear the same name, but we are different!

With our family-run hotel and our long-standing employees,
some of whom have been with us since the beginning,
we are happy to be there for you." (Martin Ortlieb)
